1. Mr. Koutz, of the office of Cong. Broyhill, called [redacted] of [redacted] trying to reach [redacted] concerning a [redacted] [redacted] who was in Cong. Broyhill's office seeking assistance in connection with possible employment. I called Mr. Koutz and stated that I would try to get the facts together in the case for him. He stated that there was no hurry; that he had difficulty in understanding what [redacted] wanted as well as his accent; and that at our convenience he would appreciate some guidance as they would not propose taking any steps until they heard from us. Mr. [redacted] and I discussed this matter with Mr. Kirkpatrick and it was agreed that we would tell the Congressman's office that [redacted] was a consistent trouble-maker with a poor reputation; that this Agency had fulfilled its obligations to him; and that we would advise the Congressman not to have any further dealings with him or to put himself "out on a limb" in [redacted] behalf.
